

The University of Hohenheim provides information on the use of YouTube.

Disclaimer on the use of YouTube by the University of Hohenheim

Subscribing to other YouTube users

If the University of Hohenheim subscribes to other YouTube users, this does not imply any statement about the relationship between the University of Hohenheim and these users or the content published by them.

In particular, it does not imply any approval or recommendation for its followers. Rather, the University of Hohenheim sees subscribing to other YouTube users as a way of networking with other bodies, people, and institutions for the rapid dissemination and obtaining knowledge of information relevant to the University.

This also means that the University of Hohenheim will not automatically subscribe to all of its followers. Even if the University of Hohenheim does not subscribe to users, this does not mean that the University of Hohenheim rejects or is not interested in the users.

Type and manner and purpose of the use

The University of Hohenheim mainly uses its account for its own video posts and sharing the video posts of others in the manner described in its use concept. The University of Hohenheim will also respond to comments as far as the exchange of information on research or study topics is concerned. The University of Hohenheim will not take note of or respond to submissions, complaints and similar content that cannot be attributed to public relations and information via YouTube. There is also no advice on studies given via YouTube. Please use the contact options provided for this purpose, in particular sending (possibly encrypted) emails to post@uni-hohenheim.de. There is no detailed advice, e.g. on studying, but the website link refers you to the relevant telephone and email contacts at the University of Hohenheim.

YouTube and data protection

The use of YouTube by the University of Hohenheim does not imply any endorsement of this medium or the company or the YouTube Privacy Policy.

The University of Hohenheim recommends that all users get themselves up to speed about the processing of their data by YouTube and protect their privacy as much as possible: This includes reading the Privacy Policy of YouTube. Key aspects are also summarized in the University of Hohenheim's own Privacy Policy on its use of YouTube.

Please bear in mind the Tips for protecting your privacy on YouTube.

Last updated: October 2024